Harmonious and Versatile Chair Family

Simple, welcoming, versatile. The Just chair, designed by Iskos-Berlin is “just” a chair, yet a very special one. The award-winning chair collection has brought joy since 2013 and has since then been accompanied by a Just Barstool and a version of the chair with an oak base.

When designing Just, the designer duo Iskos-Berlin looked to the essence of a chair. They started out with the shape of a chair as a child would typically draw it, with legs that seem to protrude directly out of the seat. They have transferred this visual effect to the Just Chair, where a steel frame is uniquely countersunk into the underside of the shell, suddenly transforming the chair into a harmonic and naturally unified whole.

This has resulted in a shell chair with a quiet yet distinctive personality, which is constructed based on a visually simplified structure. Just is characterized by its subdued and harmonious idiom that makes the chair suitable for numerous environments and styles. Iskos-Berlin says:

”Just is not born out of the desire to design a different chair. On the contrary, we wanted to use innovative molding and assembly techniques to achieve an elegant and subtle result, full of hidden details. Good design does not necessarily have to make a lot of fuss - those who want to will see the details.”

Continuing Signature Elements

The barstool is designed as an extension to the Just chair and inherits its signature elements: the clearly defined shell shaped as a molded “sandwich” of hard and light veneers as well as the light steel base, which is discretely integrated in the molded shell, so that the chair naturally comes together as a whole. The barstool comes in two heights and is available with and without a backrest.

In addition to the barstool, Iskos-Berlin has introduced a completely new dimension to the design with the chair with a wooden base. The characteristic molded shell is met by molded wooden legs, which grow from the shell in the same resolute curve that can be seen in the arch of the seat. The outward-sloping wooden legs add a charming warmth and emphasis to the design.
