NORMANN COPENHAGEN INTRODUCES ACT LAMP: SHINING A LIGHT ON REPURPOSED MATERIALS

Normann Copenhagen presents the Act Lamp, an innovative lighting collection that transforms industrial waste into purposeful pendant lamps. Crafted from discarded PE water pipe scraps – materials traditionally incinerated due to their complex composition which prevents them from being reused – the Act Lamp embodies a commitment to circular design and resourceful innovation.

Driven by a continuous exploration of resourceful production methods, designer Simon Legald saw potential in these overlooked pipes. By diagonally slicing the pipes into oval rings and meticulously fusing them into translucent lampshades, the design minimizes energy use while preserving the material's integrity. This thoughtful process not only reduces environmental impact but also highlights the inherent beauty of repurposed materials.

The resulting design offers transparency in more ways than one. The see-through lampshade casts captivating shadows when lit, reflecting the lamp's resourceful origin. The oval shape of the sliced pipe rings is mirrored in the lampshade's oval silhouette, creating a cohesive and harmonious aesthetic.

Each Act Lamp is one of a kind. While similar in overall form, no two lamps share the same ring arrangement, ensuring a distinct interplay of light and shadow in every piece.

Available in two sizes (Ø60 x H50 cm and Ø80 x H60 cm), the Act Lamp features a shade made from 100% PE-LD polyethylene industrial waste, paired with an aluminum socket, white fabric cord, and canopy.

Act Lamp is scheduled to be available online and in stores from beginning of March. Due to current circumstances, delays may occur.
