INTRODUCING THE PIX LAMP: REPURPOSING PLASTIC WASTE

Normann Copenhagen launches the new Pix Lamp collection. A reinterpretation of the archetypical spherical pendant lamp, the recognizable, timeless silhouette is used for the design of the Pix Lamp, while the captivating surface of the lamp gets its unique look from its composition of recycled plastic waste. The Pix Lamp collection comes in four different sizes pendant lamps, all characterized by the refined union between the classic globe pendant and the distinctive structure of the granulated plastic waste.

Pix Lamp is not just an aesthetic design, it is also a resourceful one. For the production of the lampshade, plastic waste in various shades of white is mixed and granulated, before being heated to a melting point of 120°, allowing the material to be reheated and reused at the end of its life without altering its properties. This particular process enables a circular life cycle and presents a design where each lampshade has its own, unique color composition. The thickness of the material makes Pix Lamp look opaque when the light is turned off. When the light is turned on, the appearance of the material transforms, obtaining a translucent look, the light from the bulb shining through and highlighting the granulated structure of the lampshade.

The familiarity of the shape makes Pix a minimalistic lamp that is easy to love and will fit seamlessly in anywhere – be it in residential spaces above the kitchen counter or dining table, in the living room corner or as sophisticated hallway lighting or as lighting in a restaurant, in the hotel lobby or in department stores. Wherever Pix is placed, its straightforward design idiom is sure to blend in with the surrounding interior while its distinctive lampshade offers a cozy, charismatic glow.
